

Wanted: Drawings For New 'Wakeup Weather' Feature!

We have lots of talented artists throughout our schools, and want to make sure that as many people as possible see their artwork.

So, here's the deal:

Teachers (and this is not just directed to art teachers), please consider asking your students to draw a weather picture, and then send it to Central Office via inter-office mail.

We will scan one each day and then share it — posting it on the district website, as well as through social media, and even embedding it in your MPS Today email.

(Btw, we will soon be going 'full-bore' trying to build a robust social media presence throughout town, and think this feature — along with our Humans of MPS gallery as well as other newsy stuff — will be a winning content formula.)

The drawings should be done horizontally on white 8x11 paper and kids can use crayons, markers, colored pencils — whatever. Include just the student's first name, grade and teacher's name, and school. And a single word that describes what category the picture belongs in. This can be written on the back or at the very bottom of the drawing.

Also — This is not an art contest. The quality of the drawing will have no bearing on whether it gets published.

These can be sent individually or in batches to CO marked 'weather drawing.' (The samples at right were 'borrowed' from the Internet.)

We will choose one at random each day that reflects the weather report.

If you have any questions, please contact me.

Thanks — Jim
